Knoxville Symphony tickets on sale to all concerts by phone, web or in person: Monday, August 14

There are two concert series featuring smaller ensembles that offer an intimate, unique concert experience: the KSO Merchant & Gould Concertmaster Series featuring new Concertmaster William Shaub held at the Knoxville Museum of Art, to which general admission tickets are on sale for $25, and the Q Series at the Square Room, which highlights the KSO Woodwind Quintet and Principal Quartet. Q Series tickets are $18 in advance, $20 at the door.

NEW THIS YEAR: KSO UnStaged

In addition to the KSO's three mainstage concert series (Masterworks, Chamber Classics, Pops) and two smaller series (Concertmaster Series and the Q Series at the Square Room), the KSO has created a new unconventional series to provide musical experiences that will refresh and surprise each ticket holder and draw in new audiences. Envisioned by dynamic Music Director Aram Demirjian, KSO UnStaged will feature partnerships with local artists, popular music fusions, core repertoire presented in a new way, visual components, and crowd participation. In addition to new venues and creative partnerships (like with local breweries), patrons can expect to hear the KSO with craft beer in hand at the Standard Knoxville or while standing in the midst of the Orchestra in an airplane hangar, with sound "taking flight" all around. Contrary to the typical concert setting and structure, small ensembles of musicians will play several sets of 10-15 minutes of music throughout the night. Tickets range from $35-$45; venues vary.
